Pythianism Must not be Exposed.

(To the Editor of Interior Journal.) The following amusing letter has been received at this office. STRASBURG, VA., Mar. 23d.-I learn that Col. J. H. Powell, of Kentucky, is exposing Pythianism. I don't think the Knights ought to allow this to be done. It is a shame and an outrage. Secrecy is our strongest protection against fraud and imposition. It is absolutely essential to our very existence. You never hear of any smart Aleck giving away the Odd Fellows, twisting the horns of the genial Elks, or divulging the tricks of the Masonic billy goat. Such andacious conduct would not be a good thing for his wholesome. Then, why should the Knights of Pythias be subjected to so great indignity. Why should the ups and downs of an Orient Prince be revealed. The man who attempts to expose us should be severely dealt with according to Oriental law, be be a Kentucky thoroughbred or one of the first families of Virginia. The Colonel is coming to our town to cut his capers labors the Presbyterian church at Ford He wou't do it though, not much.

A committee of 20 has been appointed to investigate the matter. Prof. Adler. who controls one of the largest henneries in this section, has kindly furnished us with a bushel of eggs which his hens after long travail have failed to hatch. These eggs rattle when you shake 'em, and they smell when you break 'em. The odor thereof is not like unto the attar of Rose. They have been distributed among the members of the committee, brave and determined men who will be at the Opera House, not to present flowers that wither and die, but to present the more substantial hen fruit in such a striking manner as will make Col. P. yearn for his old Kentucky home, that about 50,000 adherents. land which boasts of the fastest horses, best whisky, prettiest women and ugliest men on the habitable globe. I am willing to bow my head even unto the dust of the earth and divide the last stitch of my clothing with a Knight of Pythias in distress, but I can not, will not permit insult to the Pythian knighthood. By the Heavens above us, by the bills that seem eternal, I swear that the preserved. Yours Heroically,

The Weekly Courier-Journal has struck a popular note in its weather guessing contests. EVERY FRIDAY.

Col. BRECKINBIDGE did go the witness stand and was there when the court adjourned Friday, until yesterday, having taken two days to tell his story, which was still incomplete. In silvery accents and mellifluous tones he told how Miss Pollard introduced herself to him on a railroad train. She wrote him to visit her, acknowledged to him that she had illicit relations with Rodes, proposed that they take an evenng ride, made overtures to him in the carriage, and he, as he said, 'being a man with a man's passions," yielded. She followed him to Lexington and made arrangements to have a meeting at Sarah Guess' house-Everything in the matter was proposed or instigated by her, and he was the helpless victim of this designing woman of 17 years of age. He denied that he had ever promised to marry her, and, in fact, denied nearly everything else that Miss Pollard had sworn to, till exasperated beyond measure, she cried out, "Ob, can't be tell the truth about anything?" If he was a man with like passions as ourselves it is rather a hard story to believe, but with the regenerated all things are possible. The colonel with a great deal of sanctimoniousness and professed piety wore the livery of heaven, while inwardly he was a raving wolf. Few alas, there be of us, who can throw stones at him, for the one act, but we can all with one accord execrate and denounce a man who uses religion as a cloak for his sins and desebetter to accomplish his ends. Of all of God's miserable creatures the hypocrite is the most contemptible.

WE do not intend to apply the old saying that any fool can ask a question that a wise man can not answer, but we do say that these questions asked by the Louisville Times are pertinent to the present situation, if they may be regarded as impertinent in some quarters: If a Congress, democratic in both branches, can't pass a currency bill the president will sign, or a tariff bill that any but special interests can approve, and if a House, with a democratic majority of 80 odd, can't muster a quorum to give a member a seat to which he is clearly entitled, where is Congress at? What is it there for? And whither is the democratic party drifting to?

The governor issued a proclamation declaring Darlington and Florence counties in a state of insurrection, but the proclamation was laughed at. The South Carolina law is the most impracticable of the many passed under the guise of temperance reform and is so sumptuary and tyrannical in its operations that there is nothing left but the people to rebel.

LATER.-Gov. He disliked to act against the will of a majority of the members of Congress but duty impelled him to object to the bill becoming a law because it would unsettle the public confidence sought to be restored by the repeal of the Sherman gold from the treasury and delay the return of prosperity to the country. Many of the provisions of the bill are ambiguous, ill advised and dangerous, and would unnecessarily increase the perplexities of the secretary of the treasury monetary affairs in such a comprehenercise the rules of Lindley Murray in a free coinage bill.
